I always thought that I'd find my ideal school because of that "feeling" I'd get once I got there, and I know it's corny, but I got that feeling the moment I saw Hamilton. - Sarah Downey

Veteran broadcast journalist Tom Brokaw, the longtime anchor and managing editor of NBC Nightly News, gave the annual Sacerdote Great Names Series Lecture in the Margaret Bundy Scott Field House at Hamilton College on April 27. Brokaw shared his insights on the state of American politics and society, and called on today's youth to involve themselves in politics and public service.

Hamilton College President Joan Hinde Stewart introduced the event by speaking about the Sacerdote Great Names Series. Over the last 10 years, the series has brought distinguished speakers to Hamilton, including Jimmy Carter, Bill Clinton, Margaret Thatcher, Madeline Albright, Desmond Tutu, Colin Powell, Rudy Giuliani and F.W. deKlerk. Tom Brokaw, Stewart continued, has covered all of these former Sacerdote speakers, as well as nearly every other person of distinction during his 40-year career. He is a person of distinction in his own right, Stewart said, noting that he has "exemplified broadcast journalism at its best" during his time as host and managing editor of the NBC Nightly News.

Brokaw began his lecture by saying that it was a great privilege and honor to speak at Hamilton, and that he was grateful for the opportunity. "We should all be grateful for Hamilton and institutions of its kind," he said, "as they send qualified students into the world."

When completed just prior to the start of the 2006-07 academic year, the Charlean and Wayland Blood Fitness and Dance Center will house a dance studio, room for aerobic/cardio training, space for resistance and weight-training, a multipurpose exercise room and a three-story climbing wall. The state-of-the-art facility will triple the current space for fitness activities on a campus where approximately 75 percent of the student body — and many members of the faculty and staff — work out regularly.

Hamilton launched a new Web site design this winter. More of a modernization than a sweeping change to the content and navigation, the new design offers a cleaner, more focused appearance. "Because Web technology changes rapidly, it's normal for us to review the site's performance each year and to undertake a major redesign roughly every two years," said Ned Stankus '96, director of electronic media. "The goal of this project was to improve the visual presentation of information on the site — the site's so-called look and feel."

The 1,200-square-foot greenhouse is divided into five areas — three diversity rooms (desert, temperate and tropical), one room for student and teaching use, and one room for faculty research.

Left Bottom: The 125-seat auditorium is equipped with touch-screen audiovisual capabilities and network hookups available from each chair.

Nearly a decade after planning began, Hamilton's $56 million Science Center was dedicated this fall, bringing together faculty members in archaeology, biology, chemistry, geosciences, physics and psychology.
